

It is the intention of the management of Everbuild to continually strive to achieve the highest standards of safety and health in the operation of its business. The guiding principles and beliefs are:

- All injuries or occupational ill health can be prevented.
- Management is responsible for preventing injuries and occupational ill health.
- Working safely is a condition of employment as well as a statutory requirement.
- Safeguards can be taken against all hazard exposures.
- Safety training and employee involvement is essential.
- Prevention of injuries and occupational ill health is good business.
- Occupational health and safety is considered number one priority.
- Employees at all levels and individuals such as contractors and visitors have a responsibility for the safety process and for the safety of themselves and their colleagues.
- Compliance with all relevant H&S legal requirements and HSE /industry best practice.

The company will strive to reduce all risks of loss which may occur from:

- Personal injury or occupational illness.
- Fires.
- Damage to property.
- Damage to the environment.
- Loss to operations.

It is the objective of the company to continually reduce the incidence of accidents, occupational ill health and other loss incidents. This objective will be met through a structured safety programme, employee involvement, and through hazard identification, risk assessment from which safe systems of work and a safe working environment will be developed. Everbuild will provide adequate resources, supervision and training to ensure that the objectives are met.
